Chapter 1 by Elden

I sat down, staring at it. My parents had said that looking at it wasn't going to make me smarter, but I was going to prove them wrong. I looked it up, and only smart people could solve them. Where I'm from, I'm considered smart. So this was a strong ambition for me.

Why wasn't it solving itself already? I had stared at it for 7 hours, 43 minutes, and 28 seconds already. Then came the time I decided to touch it. It felt warm in my hands, especially since it was under a lamp for 8 hours. I dared to think about turning a side, but then I immediately regretted the thought, telling myself I wasn't ready for that yet. Just not yet. I put it down, and checked the time. 3:36 in the morning. My parents are on vacation, and my younger sister is at summer camp. I had the whole vacation to myself, alone.

With this Rubix Cube.

Chapter 2 by Groot

Day 10: I am still staring at it. I don't know why, but I do not need to eat anything or sleep. I only stare at it in hope that it makes me smarter.

day 200: the rubix cube grew a beard and so did I am smarter? I mean I did grow a beard

Chapter 4 by NotPhantim

Day 350: My beard grew a beard... Am I officially smarter now? Also I figured out how to french braid the Rubix Cube's beard.

Chapter 5 by Wolfato the Bunacado (Wolves4Days) - Inactive

Day...wait, were these days really...MINUTES? 10 minutes, to 20 minutes, to 30 minutes. Huh...every second feels like an hour, and every hour feels like a day. Oh! It turns out my "beard" was really a neighborhood cat that snuck in my house and clawed its way onto my face. And the "beard's beard" was a little dust bunny. Also, the "beard" on the Rubix Cube was the cat's kitten...it wasn't very happy about its new braided tail. Hint for the future, either don't get a cat, or just remove its goblin like claws. After coming back to reality, I realized what had to be done. It was time to touch the god like figure. It was time to solve...The Rubix Cube.

Chapter 6 by robin hood

(PS. I solve Rubik's Cubes in under a minute, so I know what I'm talking about)

Anyway, back to the Rubik's Cube.

I was going to have to start solving it...

Well, I finished the first layer easily. Then the second and then, I am up to the last layer?!

R' D' R D. That was the last algorithm for it. I positioned the first three corners, and stared. The last one was red, blue, and yellow, but it was positioned with the blue on the top?! That is impossible?! I checked the other sides to make sure I hadn't missed a piece. I hadn't.

It had been tampered with many stories recently of a mysterious man called the Rubix man, replacing one piece of each Rubix Cube with a fake, messing up the entire Cube therefore making it unsolvable. He would take all the pieces and hide them in his secret lair to make a Giant Rubix Cube.

Luckily I knew exactly where the lair was, but I needed to find exactly the right piece and with so many Rubix Cube pieces I would need to use something to help me.

I found a way to make a magnet only attracting the missing piece of my cube. I went to the abandoned warehouse belonging to the Rubix Thief and went inside.

Chapter 8 by Becky Luis

Forgoing the fact that having an abandoned warehouse as a lair is so small time criminal -- I mean, bonus points for stealth, but this Rubix Thief should really think bigger. Why not a castle or a volcanic island as a lair?

Now that I was able to get what I needed -- that piece of my rubix cube -- how dare he take MY RUBIX CUBE. I loved that fucking cube, man. Bummer.

I was determined to get it back. I shall be the Sherlock to this Rubix Thief's Moriarty. I will be the one to take him down, get my cube, and bring order to the cube.

The problem was...the lock on the door was in the shape of a Rubix Cube.

I was sooooo close earlier -- why can't I remember that stupid algorithm for rubix-cube solving? I reached for my phone to Google the answer, but quickly realized that in my attempts to build a rubix-piece-finding magnet, I had deconstructed it.
